Is there any simple workaround (client side) or any plugins available for CRM systems for this? A: Finally after trying different approaches I think I got it working through the steps below: Enable integration of Facebook on the CRM system. Configure the Facebook connect to the system. Facebook login should be enabled on the CRM system. After the Facebook connect is enabled, I was not able to login through Facebook. So I disabled it and for future logins I used a seperate login system which is more or less a combination of Google and Facebook accounts. I'd like to keep track of the time at which each event took place and I'm wondering how to implement this with Numba. For example, given the input array array([0., 0., 1., 0., 0., 2., 1.]) I want to compute: (e0, e1, e2, e3) = (first event started at 0), (first event started at 1), (first event started at 2), (first event started at 3) [(first event started at 0), (first event started at 1), (first event started at 2), (first event started at 3)] And for each event: (time0, time1, time2) = (time of event started at e0), (time of event started at e1), (time of event started at e2) [(time of event started at e0), (time of event started at e1), (time of event started at e2)] How can this be done with Numba/numpy? A: I propose a solution using explicit indexing instead of eigenvalues: from numba import vectorize, float64, int64 import numpy as np @vectorize(['float64[:],float64[:],int64[:],int64[:]', 648931e174
